

AAEN-CI Action for the Future of the Environment

The AAEN-CI Foundation (Action for the Future of Natural Environment - Ivory Coast) is a non-profit, independent, secular and apolitical organization, headquartered in Bingerville (Abidjan District). With extensive expertise of its founders in botany and entomology and horticulture, and ICT, it is acting in the field of environment and green tourism (ecotourism). The Foundation has developed several projects related to environment in Ivory Coast, ranging from green classes for schoolchildren and college students to the design of a large botanical garden featuring all its attributes through various contributions to reforestation and restoration of biodiversity and ecotourism. Created in October 2014, the AAEN-CI Foundation received approval from the Ivorian Ministry of Territorial Administration (order n°0761/MATED/DGAT/DAG/SDVA) on August 12, 2020.

As a grassroots organization, AAEN-CI is viscerally committed to positive results and is struggling against any waste, as concerns energy, materials or money. It therefore ensures using every investment for the only benefit of the environment; it is opposed to the fakes who divert public funds and subsidies and to the bad faith and misconceptions in environment intentionally spread by individuals or structures who are eager for material gain and less concerned by the sustainability of biodiversity.

AAEN-CI Projects

The first aim of the Foundation is to establish itself more firmly and therefore to work in two directions: to build a new headquarters matching the extent of its projects and to get a stronger reputation.

The second important aspect is to educate and raise peoples' awareness about environment and biodiversity. Already operational tools and several projects run in this direction: the websites, the newsletter, the green class programs we can submit to teachers and school directors, as well as our participation in various events. Audio-visual materials for educational purposes are being developed too. An extensive and richly documented database of plant and animal species is under development and it will be available to members of the Foundation, as well as teachers and qualified scientists and some of our partners.

The third axis is the knowledge of the terrain. We regularly conduct exploratory missions to learn about the status of less or more sensitive, protected or not protected areas, and in some cases, we do it repeatedly to evaluate the changes in overall situation and biodiversity.

The fourth axis, and not least, is the preservation and restoration of the natural environment whereas it is possible. Partnerships are being explored with local communities, authorities, NGOs, CSOs or simply groups of young people, for the preservation of endangered areas like mangroves, forests, wetlands, etc. We are developing a special strategy for forest restoration in which we drive biodiversity and preservation of endemic and highly valuable, slowly growing species which are neglected in conventional approaches and are therefore highly endangered. We are looking to develop reforestation tree farms in various parts of the territory and to make plants available to the communities in order to regenerate or create forests of great local touristic and ecological interest.

The synthesis is established in our large botanical garden project in itself, that is to say, playing its role as showcase of biodiversity and touristic attraction of international level, as a place of relaxation, as a support education of the population, but also as a research centre and in saving endangered plant species.

AAEN-CI Support us and become a member!

The AAEN-CI Foundation may be supported in different ways beyond simple verbal encouragement!

The basic approach is to join the Foundation. It's free! Just make the request (it may be done online, on the www.aaen-ci.org website), first register, then read and approve the statutes and the Charter of the Foundation available for download on the site, and describe your motivations. Membership is subject to approval by the Founding Members, which, in practice, should not be an issue. New members are welcome!

You can help the Foundation in facilitating access to various authorities, or simply promoting its actions.

Of course, the Foundation is open to all forms of sponsorship, within the Laws and Regulations and in accordance with its Statutes, which may qualify donors for the position of Benefactors ("membres bienfaiteurs").

Local communities and environment-conscious commercial and industrial companies can also establish win-win partnerships with the Foundation, who will be pleased to bring its expertise in environmental matters whenever it is necessary.

AAEN-CI and green tourism

Green Tourism is the AAEN-CI Foundation's secular arm. To support its actions and projects, the AAEN-CI Foundation offers comprehensive 5 to 15 days ecotourism tours to small groups of no more than 10 to 12 persons. Thanks to partnerships with selected operators, these circuits include the reception, transport and accommodation in hotels, catering and visits of environmentally remarkable places including forests, rivers, mangroves, national parks, gardens and / or agro-industrial sites like plantations and factories, commented and explained by an expert of the Foundation and / or a qualified guide acknowledged by the Foundation. To avoid unexpected inconvenience and bad surprises to its visitors, the Foundation offers only excursions, tours, accommodation and restaurants it has validated by practical experience and for which it has established solid partnerships. Any step may be enrolled in its programs only if it meets this mandatory requirement.

For now, circuits offered by the Foundation, which covered initially only the South of Côte d'Ivoire, ranging from Adiaké to San Pedro over Grand Bassam, Grand Lahou and Sassandra, extend now their range including the area of Yamoussoukro and the Nawa Region with the town of Soubré and the lake of Buyo in their packages.
